the
New York Guard
switches to
ARMY COMBAT UNIFORM

The New York Guard has a new look.

The Adjutant General, Maj. Gen Patrick Murphy has officially authorized members of New York's volunteer state defense force to wear a modified Army Combat Uniform, phasing out the use of the old Army Battle Dress Uniform.

NYG Directive 1334.2 authorizes the much anticipated change following in the footsteps of the New York Army National Guard.

"The long awaited switch to the Army Combat Uniform for soldiers of the New York Guard became a necessity this year, due to the dwindling availability of the old Battle Dress Uniform," said New York Guard Deputy Chief of Staff, Col. David Molik.

The ACU uniform may look the same as our National Guard counterparts, but there are various changes mandated to give a clear distinction between the personnel of both organizations, Molik explained.

Listed are the changes and various tips on how NYG soldiers can insure they purchase the authorized materials as set forth by the uniform directive.

The G4 section, which is responsible for the transition and implementation of the new regulation, urges soldiers to purchase uniform items from NYG authorized retailers.

There are many retailers selling uniform items of poor quality. Not all ACU looking uniforms are authorized. Recommended retailers are not mandated to be used. The sole mention of any retailer is to help direct service personnel to where the authorized materials can be obtained)
